IE: Large, size of an adult person or size of a large dog, warm body which has brown fur, is warm and its rhythmic expansion/contraction makes it appear to be breathing. It is in a bundle or round ball curled together, I only see it as a round ball that is covered in brown hairs or fur all over. It is very warm and it exudes warmth, meaning that it is radiating warmth out from itself.

There are strong colors of a medium brown, purple, and red across the whole entire target site.

I'm scared a little bit of this target, I am afraid to approach, I get startled.

The fear I have of this element is not the kind of fear of being hurt or injured, instead it is the fear of not wanting to touch or approach something that is unsettling and which I do not want to touch.

I do not want to touch it, this brown furry thing! It's something alive, a brown furry hairy animal or person with head hair.

It is kind, nothing aggressive or mean about it. There's definitely life and movement here, meaning mammals (i.e. human or other hairy mammal animal).

Color! The whole space of the target landscape is purple and red strong color! I see no white space and no sky. The entire image is taken up by these two strong colors!

And also this target landscape feels warm! It exudes warmth, it radiates warmth.

This target is so cramped packed into a tight space! We are not free to roam around, there is the lack of fresh open empty air: we are in a compressed space with clearly defined boundaries. It is so warm here and the air is therefore difficult to breathe.

The hairy brown hair arm of an animal, front leg of a dog, inside of a box. And it's so purple and red here! Strong colors.

I find a floor! A stone floor of light gray color, and the dog was standing on it there.

It's very warm here.

We're inside of a box: meaning, a smaller space which is confined by walls, ceiling, and floor.

Heat is radiating out it feels so warm there!

It's hard to breathe there because of the warmth!

Something rolls across the floor, a large stone ball and I heard the sound of the stone ball slowly rolling across the stone floor.

Something warm was put into a place.

The red element is wavy with motion and it feels like touching flesh when I touch it.

I can't breathe there.

It is something held in the arms, with the arms wrapped around it, carried in the arms, wrapped into the arms.

No elevation, not up in the sky, we are at the ground.

It's a bit happy, warm and fun about this, meaning not sad or angry or fierce emotional profile.

It has to do with the body, perhaps something that is eaten.

The purple thing has a fluid, a liquid, thin.

This target is carried, contained in a small space, red and purple in color, and warm.

Something was wrapped around into itself, kind of folded around itself. Something wrapped into a ball.

Something is a big ball.

Something is icy cold there when I poke around with my finger.

A creature (animal or human) lies on the ground and is curled up together into a ball almost and it has brown hairs and it lies inside of a small confined space like inside of a box.

I poke my finger around and end up touching red muscle again which is chewy and red.

Something is funny to someone here about what this target is.

A human or an animal rolls itself into a ball and rolls then down across the floor.

Everything is in a small space. I put my hand on the outside of this box and the box rolls away.

The human or animal carries something inside of his stomach or in his arms, this being is covered in brown hair and looks more like an animal.

He curls into a ball, it's like he's hiding.

This target takes us inside of a body.

Maybe like a Mongolian horse. Earlier I was thinking like China or Mongolian artifacts with the brown dog when I saw its paws it reminded me of those protective "ugly dogs" in China those Peking dogs.

There is a gray ball that rolls!

I hug the ball and the target tells me that this target instead has to do with "what is inside".

The purple is thin like air or liquid.

There's a big light gray ball of stone that rolls across the floor. It's too heavy to lift up with my hands.

We are inside of a light gray building of stone bricks, not really bricks but blocks more like. It has a bit of an ancient feel to it and not a modern Western civilization kind of a place.

A ball was rolled. This big stone gray ball. Someone thought this was funny. They have poured water on this ball. We are inside something, and something rolled like a ball. And something was eaten. And I see an animal with brown hairy dog paws. Feels like China or Mongolian ancient. We are inside of a stomach.

Question: Why does this target want to show me the inside of this stomach as being relevant to answering what the target is?

We are inside the stomach of a dog. It is surrounded by red and purple. There are puppies inside of the dog's stomach, it is pregnant! The dog has eaten something as well. And this rolling gray ball of stone that rolls across the floor.
