Session Summary:

Dense block that I call a "step up", stairs lead up so people can stand on it. The floor in front of it rises up to become a mound. Black spikes around the floor mound also rise up when the mound rises. Water surrounds a vast landscape on the floor level. A huge mountain in the far distance which is off limits to us. Seen was a cat sitting on the mound keeping its balance and a speedboat racing through the water. We can breathe at the stairs but we cannot breathe at the spikes, and we have trouble keeping our balance on the step up and on the risen mound.

The Colosseum or Coliseum, also known as the Flavian Amphitheatre. Latin: Amphitheatrum Flavium; Italian: Anfiteatro Flavio or Colosseo , is called an oval amphitheatre in the centre of the city of Rome, Italy. Built of travertine (a natural stone block), tuff (rock made of volcanic ash), and brick-faced concrete, it is the largest amphitheatre ever built. The Colosseum is situated just east of the Roman Forum. Construction began under the emperor Vespasian in AD 72, and was completed in AD 80 under his successor and heir Titus. Further modifications were made during the reign of Domitian (81–96). These three emperors are known as the Flavian dynasty, and the amphitheatre was named in Latin for its association with their family name (Flavius). The Colosseum could hold, it is estimated, between 50,000 and 80,000 spectators, having an average audience of some 65,000; it was used for gladiatorial contests and public spectacles such as mock sea battles (for only a short time as the hypogeum was soon filled in with mechanisms to support the other activities), animal hunts, executions, re-enactments of famous battles, and dramas based on Classical mythology. The building ceased to be used for entertainment in the early medieval era. It was later reused for such purposes as housing, workshops, quarters for a religious order, a fortress, a quarry, and a Christian shrine. Although partially ruined because of damage caused by earthquakes and stone-robbers, the Colosseum is still an iconic symbol of Imperial Rome and is listed as one of the New 7 Wonders of the World. It is one of Rome's most popular tourist attractions.
